

Deadlock Breaks Over Regional Pact Angle in Security

League's proposed economic and social council. A conference committee studying plans for that agency voted unanimously last night that it would rank next to the powerful security council, in order to emphasize the importance of promoting economic, social, educational and similar activities on a world-wide scale as essential to a lasting peace.

The Dumbarton Oaks plan, which China, Russia, the United States and Britain drew up at Washington last fall, provided that the council should be subordinate to the league assembly. Russia insisted then on concentrating on peace-enforcing arrangements, as in the security council, but has since swung over to the Anglo-American-Chinese argument, that weight must be given to building a peace as well as to being ready to fight for it.

A conference committee assigned to study peaceful means by which the security council might try to settle future international disputes after the better part of a three-hour session last night debating whether the big powers in the council should have a veto in such cases. Canada proposed that an affirmative vote of any seven of the 11 council members should be enough to have the council take up a dispute and recommend a settlement. There was much argument reported but no decision.

they will not be able to produce under 1942 ceilings, those which accept 1942 ceilings will not have to clear through O.P.A.

On applications for industry-wide increases, O.P.A. will use a formula to decide whether higher prices are warranted. This will be based on 1941 costs and prices, increases in wage and materials costs since then, and profit position in 1936-39.

Even where there are industry-wide increases it may be necessary to approve added price hikes for individual plants, Bowles said.

Small manufacturers will not have to wait for a determination on an industry-wide application, but may apply individually to O.P.A. for an adjustment.

on that street also suffered from flooded cellars.

He expressed the opinion that the trouble was caused by surface water that was not carried off in the sewers.

If this surface water was diverted he believed that the conditions complained of would be relieved.

The board assured him that the matter would receive attention, and efforts made to alleviate conditions.

Alderman Eugene Cornwell of the Eleventh ward, was also present at the meeting, but said he would not take up the board's time as the matter had been thoroughly covered by Mr. Tremper.

Mr. Albert E. Marx of 232 Clinton avenue sent in a communication that was read at the meeting asking the board to erect a fence between her property and Hulton Park.

The board instructed Secretary A. Foster Winfield to write to Mr. Marx that as soon as it was possible to obtain necessary fencing materials action would be taken.

The board opened sealed bids for the concessions in the municipal stadium and Forsyth Park. The only bids received were from Thomas J. Murray for the stadium concession, he agreeing to award the concession to turn over to the board $200 per cent of the gross revenue, and a bid of $25 from Morris Cooper of 11 East Strand for the Forsyth Park concession.

Both bids were accepted.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

Too Young

Eugene, Ore., May 12 (AP)—Two teen-aged girls enviously eyed passing student couples in this University of Oregon town.

"I'll be glad when we're freshmen in college," sighed one, "then maybe we can start going out with those high school seniors."

Chanticleer II

San Francisco, May 12 (AP)—Chanticleer, the folk-lore rooster who was convinced his crowing made the sun come, has a namesake in a rod-riding rooster reported by crewmen of a Southern Pacific train.

They named him Chanticleer II because he crowed every time the train emerged from a tunnel in a trip here from Los Angeles.

May Yuletide

Kansas City, May 12 (AP)—It took until May, but Christmas finally caught up with Sgt. John Hoedel.

Sergeant Hoedel commanded a tank in the battle of Bastogne last Christmas and received no gifts from home. Four days later he lost an arm when a German shell struck his tank.

When he arrived home yesterday from an army hospital his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hoedel, awaited him with a gift-laden Christmas tree.

Whistler

Denver, May 12 (AP)—Play a hymn such as "There's Power in the Blood," and you'll have a whistling accompaniment if you're listening to Samuel Parr is around.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Esta D. Parr, say Ivan has been whistling since he was six months old.

Are These Trips Necessary?

Osgo, Iowa, May 12 (AP)—A family of young robins has been riding comfortably with Oscar H. Olson on his garbage collection route.

Olson first noticed the nest when he measured his wagon for a new tongue. Each morning thereafter the mother robin flew away when the team was hitched up. At the end of the day mom and pop robin would be waiting patiently for their brood.

Frustration

Hallsville, Ill., May 12 (AP)—In a way the meat shortage is bothering Lady, Harry Primmer's wire-haired terrier.

Lady has mothered baby pigs each year, Primmer said, ever since the death of a sow orphaned her litter, whereupon Lady took over.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, MAY 12, 1945

MOTHER'S DAY

The second Sunday in May comes more hopefully to Mothers this year. Mothers of men in Europe thank God for the relief from the anxiety of the bad time now past. Mothers of men in the Pacific thank God that their chances of life are increased by the aid that is now beginning to reach them. With half the war behind, hope for the future grows.

Mothers of heroes are being told, with sober truth, that heroes become heroic only when good principles have been instilled into them in childhood by their parents—when their own homes are rightly run, with love of God, their country and their neighbors as part of the air they breathe, with observance of the laws of God and country as the accepted way of life.

It is well for Mothers of small children to think on these things now. What sort of world will there be for these boys and girls when they are grown? The sort of world they make, under the moral guidance of the mothers now guiding their first steps. A world of faith, it is hoped, and love, and tolerance, of duty and kindness and serious purpose. Will the mothers of America make that kind of world? We believe they will.

JOIN THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Kingston Chamber of Commerce, which is in an embryonic stage having been recently formed, is beginning to show results. President Manuel Reina has announced the opening here of a new factory. Other announcements will follow.

Active in the newly formed organization are men in all lines of diversified production and employment in the city. These men act as a unit in presenting a program. They can be no more successful than the people will it to be.

That an enterprising Chamber of Commerce can produce results is widely recognized. Acceptance, however, is not enough. It must be applied. There is but one way to apply it and that is through membership by all the business and professional people of the city.

The membership drive now underway is progressing steadily. Volunteer workers, who have been visiting the industrial, business and professional people, report an enthusiastic response among many of those solicited.

It is anticipated that those who have not taken out memberships will do so by the next report meeting Tuesday evening.

If the volunteer workers who are giving of their time in securing memberships have missed anyone, the memberships may be sent directly to the Chamber of Commerce office in the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Venezuela has received 20,000 guitar strings from the United States for the local swains to use in serenading their senoritas. Fine for the senoritas, but what about their neighbors?

ONE DOWN!

The bold and cruel Nazi foe is beaten and apparently left incapable of further harm. On that vital European front the Allied Nations can now proceed to sweep up the remains of the great struggle and gradually restore the eastern hemisphere to a normal status.

This fact in itself represents an immense gain. The task of reactivating central Europe and bringing rebellious and predatory Germans into peaceful cooperation may be long and difficult, but it can be done.

So American attention, reinforced by British collaboration, turns now more definitely to the Pacific area, shifting the bulk of our military power half way around the world. It is a relief, in spite of the known size of the task, to be free at last for concentration on that job.

The power of Japan, as experts remind us, is by no means broken. It has given ground in spots, but tends to tighten up more and more as we draw near its vital areas. It has large and well equipped armies providing a ring of strong defense. These facts are natu-

CAN THE O.P.A.

The essential difference between an enterprise managed privately and one run by government is that in private enterprise if management fails, it is fired or the business goes broke; in government the politicians try to save each other's faces.

The O.P.A. is a case in point. Here is a badly conceived agency, mismanaged from the start, now an obvious failure—yet being continued because to admit failure is a political liability for those who have to make the admission.

O.P.A.'s real difficulty, apart from inexperienced and untrained direction, is that it lacks authority in the fields which it attempts to control. Take, for instance, the subject of meat. The Department of Agriculture, the War Food Administration, the War Labor Board and the Office of Economic Mobilization all have a piece of authority over meat and meat production. The Army, Navy, Lend-Lease and U.N.R.R.A. make demands on the resources of meat and certainly the Army, Navy and Lend-Lease have had priorities over the civilian consumer. O.P.A. then seeks to regulate what it has only a partial authority to regulate, namely, the availability and price of meat.

O.P.A., then, can rightly weep that they are doing the best they can in the circumstances. Maybe so. The point is well-taken that nothing constructive can be accomplished unless there is a single, over-all authority over food such as Herbert Hoover represented during the other war. Add to the fact that such authority is lacking, the astonishing incapacity and inefficiency of O.P.A. from its inception, then it ceases to be surprising that this agency of government is perhaps the outstanding failure of the war.

I have been reading the proceedings of the Senate Sub-Committee of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry which has been investigating this question of food. On the witness stand was Thomas I. Emerson, Deputy Administrator for Enforcement of the O.P.A. Here is a man whose department is charged with "all enforcement of price, rationing, and rent regulations," for the entire country. He was asked:

"The Chairman: Whatever policies are determined upon by O.P.A., it is your duty to see that they are carried out according to the rules and regulations?"

"Mr. Emerson: That is right."

Now what experience has this man had with law enforcement? He had worked with a New York law firm for two years. Then in 1933, he got into the government, first with the N.R.A.; then with N.L.R.B.; then with the S.S.B.; then in the Attorney-General's office and finally the O.P.A. So Senator Wheeler asked him:

"Senator Wheeler: Did you ever try a law suit?"

"Mr. Emerson: I never tried a suit in private practice, no."

To get this gentleman's point of view:

Senator Bushfield: According to the news accounts of your activities, some of your fines lately have been fantastic. You never find that in courts."

"Mr. Emerson: The larger fines have been awarded by the courts. In some cases they have been settled outside of court at pretty high figures, but those were cases against the large corporations who were well represented by counsel."

"Senator Bushfield: And that justifies an outrageous fine, does it?"

"Mr. Emerson: No sir. But I am assuming (sic) they are able to take care of themselves."

"Senator Bushfield: Then, you agree with me that because they were corporations and well represented, you believe that they ought to be soaked; is that your policy?"

Senator Wheeler asked about facts:

"Mr. Emerson: We have enough of a staff to determine what the facts are, Senator."

"Senator Wheeler: If you have enough of a staff to determine what the facts are, then there is something wrong with your staff."

"Mr. Emerson: It takes a much larger staff to take action on the facts than it does to know what the facts are."

"Senator Wheeler: But you haven't got the facts."

"Mr. Emerson: We know generally what the situation is."

"Senator Wheeler: Listen, if you know generally what the situation is, then there is something crooked in O.P.A. in your office. . . Either you don't know what the facts are, or if you do know then there is something crooked in the enforcement in your various offices in these cities. You can take either horn of the dilemma you want."

SUGAR IN URINE AND DIABETES

As examination of the urine is a part of all military or insurance examinations, the finding of sugar in the urine is always suggestive of diabetes. Although diabetes is now controlled by the use of insulin, military medical examiners do not accept diabetes and insurance companies make many examinations of the urine where there is even a slight amount of sugar above normal amount present in urine. This is because any skin irritation, an accident of any kind in a diabetic is a difficult condition to treat or cure. It is important, therefore, that a diabetic be not accepted for front line military duty, and it is also important that a recruit or candidate for insurance be not rejected when condition is not true diabetes—diabetes mellitus.

In the American Journal, Digestive Diseases, Dr. H. J. St. John suggests the following test for diagnosis of sugar in urine in diabetes:

"After sugar has been discovered in the urine the patient should eat a heavy carbohydrate (starch) lunch at 11:30 a.m. The amount of sugar in the blood should be determined or measured two and a half hours after the eating of this lunch. About 30 drops of blood is sufficient for this purpose. If the amount of sugar in the blood is below 120 mg. per hundred cubic centimeters the patient is not a true diabetic. If the amount of sugar is above 120 mg. he is probably a true diabetic. If it is well above 120, say 200 or more, true diabetes is present. If it is just slightly above 120 (125 or 126), further tests are necessary as an increase of sugar in blood and also in urine occur after the eating of a heavy starch meal."

Sugar in the urine in a non-diabetic does not mean that the individual is likely to develop true diabetes, so that there is no need for these individuals to worry about sugar in the urine if sugar in the blood is not above the limits above mentioned.

In the treatment of true diabetes, proper diet and insulin prevents death or prolongs life for many years.

There is no treatment for cases where sugar in urine is not due to diabetes and none is needed.

Diabetes is a disease of middle age and may appear so gradually as to be unrecognized by the patient. Send today for Dr. Barton's helpful booklet entitled "Diabetes", enclosing ten cents and a three cent stamp to cover cost of handling and mailing.

You, You—No One but You—

"At Century's Turn"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

There are many men in Kingston today who as boys each summer attended the annual boys' camp of the local Y. M. C. A. One of the most popular of the camps was that at Glenrie, which was first named "The Wood's Y Camp for Boys" but at a meeting of the boys' camp committee held at the Y in May, 1929, it was decided to change the name of the camp to Camp Preumaker.

Preumaker in the early days of the founding of Kingston was a sachem of the Esopus Tribe of Lenape Indians, and was noted for his wisdom, and for that reason the camp committee decided to name the camp in his honor.

The camp that year was in charge of Chester R. Hall, the boys' work secretary of the local association, and he was assisted by C. Warren Kins of the high school faculty, Kenneth LeFever, now in the medical corps of the armed forces, was studying medicine in 1929 in Albany, and he looked after the health of the boys in camp and administered first aid when needed.

Clarence S. Rowland was chairman of the camp committee in 1929, and the other members included Harry Frey, Albert Kules, C. B. Van Ingen, W. H. Niles, Ernest Hicks, the Rev. Dr. Frank B. Seely, George E. Lowe, Clarence Dunn and Arthur Quimby.

One of the most active musical organizations in the city in the late 1920's was the Schubert Choral Club of the Y. W. C. A., with Miss Virginia Loskamp as conductor.

The club as its annual meeting on May 3, 1929, elected Miss Mildred Foster as president; Mrs. Floyd Rich, vice president; Mrs. Thelma Durr, treasurer; Mrs. Nelson Smith, secretary, and Miss Ethel Schlecht.

The concert given by the club during the years it was active were among the highlights of the musical life of Kingston.

The young people of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church on May 1, 1929, presented two one-act plays in the assembly rooms of the church which were well received and excellently acted. The first was "Honest Peggy" and included in the cast were Helen Pratt, Louisa Toms, Mildred Healy, Shirley Merrill, Mary Matthews, Myra Barth, Lillian Coffin and Isabel Brigham.

The second was "Tuning Up for the Wedding" and in the cast were Helen Pratt, Evelyn Brigham, Lucile Coffin, Mary Matthews, Harriet Whitbeck, Anna Whitbeck, Mrs. Norman Swibold, Mrs. Russell Coffin, Mrs. W. W. Brady, Jr., and Dorothy Emmett.

With the annual May Day exercises at the high school this year postponed by the unexpected snow storm of May 10, it is interesting to recall that on May 17, 1929, impressive exercises were held at the high school when Marie Pfommer was crowned Queen of May.

The maid of honor was Vivian Klothe, and the queen's attendants were Janice Steiner, Mildred Healy, Virginia Smith, Louisa Toms, Florence Baltz, Elizabeth Niles, Elsie Groves and Betty Flemming.

The prime minister was Vincent Connelly.

Charles J. Mullen, now in charge of the Kingston War Price and Rationing Board, for years has been actively interested in local fraternal affairs.

On May 15, 1929, he was appointed a member of the Board of Fire Commissioners by Mayor E. J. Dempsey, and served for several years.

Following the death of Dr. E. H. Loughran, who had been serving the city as health officer, the Board of Health met on May 16, 1929, and appointed Dr. Lester E. Sanford of Clinton avenue, to fill the vacancy.

Dr. Sanford served as health officer for many years, and proved one of the most efficient men who ever held the post. Under his administration thousands of children of the city were immunized against diphtheria.

Regional Peace Enforcement Seems to Be Next Step of San Francisco Conference

By DAVID LAWRENCE

San Francisco, May 12—Having failed to achieve here a world-wide organization to enforce peace in all circumstances, the next step now seems to be in the direction of regional systems.

The difference between the two ideas is, of course, that in the one all the military power of the world would be concentrated on the task of squelching any threat of war, and in the other the world organization delegates regional enforcement to regional bodies.

In a practical sense, this means that the inter-American countries could receive from the Security Council a delegation of power to handle any problems in this hemisphere when aggression arises from any source. But this also means that in European affairs a similar delegation of power would have to be made.

On its face, this looks like a simple solution, but everything depends on what effect the veto power granted at Yalta to the big powers will have on the exercise of delegated powers. Thus, if any major power can block any step leading up to delegation of authority to a regional system, the result is virtually the same as if there had been no regional arrangement. For a European power could block action by any American country against aggressors inside this hemisphere, and any American country could block action by any European country.

In the final analysis there is a readiness to allow the Security Council to delegate power to regional bodies but with the understanding that the action must be the joint operation of the members in that area and not a unilateral or single-handed affair.

No matter which area is affected, whether the American hemisphere or the European continent, the fact remains that nothing can be done if any of the major powers exercise their veto power in the Security Council.

This is recognized here and is accepted as one of the unfortunate results of the Yalta agreement, but there is an effort here nevertheless to limit the powers of the major countries so that they will not be able to block recommendations made to the Court of Public Opinion by the council.

As matters stand now, any major power which is itself party to a dispute cannot vote to prevent a recommendation or finding from being published. But there is nothing in the charter as amended at Yalta which would prevent any major power that happens not to be a party to a dispute from blocking such a recommendation, anyway. Thus, France and Italy might have a quarrel and the Security Council might consider recommendations for settlement. France herself as a member of the council would not be able to block the publication of a recommendation. But Russia, being bound by a treaty of alliance with France, could block the making of any recommendations by the Security Council.

If the charter is amended so that no nation which is or is not a party to a dispute may use her veto power to prevent the publication of findings or recommendations for a solution of a dispute that threatens peace, the situation would be solved.

Actually all that is sought here is a chance to mobilize world opinion to prevent the outbreak of war. It would appear that the least that could be voted at San Francisco as a means of overcoming the had impression given by the original scope of the Yalta voting procedure with unlimited veto to the major powers who sit on the Security Council.

Anthony Eden's discussion with the press this week was designed to reveal the effort at revision, which is being made, but at the moment the proposal for limitation of the veto power has to be submitted to various delegations for their approval and the Big Four themselves are not yet agreed on it.

Everything here revolves around protection of Russia's interests. Russia, in the first instance, insisted on the veto power or would not have joined in any world league. America and Britain themselves were ready to go all the way and submit to the discipline of a Security Council. The present status is that no military coercion can be applied against any major power and hence the drive is to get such machinery into the charter as will make it possible for the world to learn by an official pronouncement of the council who is and who is not an aggressor in any controversy that arises to threaten world peace. Dateline: Pacific

By JAMES HUTCHESON
Aboard a cruiser bound for Borneo (AP)—To the denim-clad members of a warship's crew, it must seem that half their lives are spent standing in lines.

There's the breakfast line, the lunch line, the dinner line, the ice cream line, the soda fountain line and the ship's store line. Lines run through passageways, up ladders, across decks. They stretch out like a line you'd find in front of a butcher shop with a sign: "Fresh Steaks—35c a lb."

It takes half an hour up to get through a chow line when a tasty menu draws the boys in force. An average ice cream counter line runs up a 15-minute wait. The wait for peanuts, shaving cream, hair tonic or cigarettes averages half an hour and up.

Most of the boys figure the ice cream line brings the best return for the time spent. Some of them run through it two or three times during the ten hours a day the "crank counter" is open.

The line in the Navy—and that includes the off-duty-appearing mess quality staff—is produced aboard ships from pre-mixed preparation. But it's a sad day when it runs low. Some of the ships in this fleet have run out.

On this cruiser, commanded by Capt. Jack Dunham of Tacoma, Wash., officers are barred from the ice cream stand and crew members can buy it only on days when it isn't served as a meal. When Lieut. Cmdr. Parker P. Halpern of Ashland, Mass., looked in the ice cream compartment today, he issued a warning that purchases probably would be reduced to every other day.

That's worse news to the boys out here than would be an increase in steak to 20 points a pound in the States.

It's quite a job to feed the 1,200 crew members aboard one of these ships. For an average day, the following quantities of food would be prepared under the eye of the chief commissary steward.

Half a ton of potatoes, 800 pounds of meat, 600 pounds of canned vegetables, 250 pounds of sugar, 125 of butter, 156 of evaporated milk and 100 dozen eggs, for one egg per man. It would be quite an order in any corner grocery.

But on many an average day at sea, the stews are dehydrated and the eggs are ditto.

A half ton of spuds for a day takes a heap of peeling, but the messmen have the advantage of paring machines. They also get a month extra pay while on the peeling detail.

But you didn't better let that word get around too freely. It might make the Army K.P.'s and der than blazes.

Ashdowns Give Flag In Memory of Son

The Third Ward Tablet Committee was recently presented with a new American flag by Mr. and Mrs. William F. Ashdown of 154 Foxhall avenue in memory of their son, William David Ashdown, who died while serving in the Army. It is intended to use this new flag for the first time on Memorial Day. The names of 29 more men and women from the Third Ward have been added to the tablet. The committee has found it necessary to go to the expense of placing glass frames over the name board in order to eliminate the damage being done by the children playing in the tablet area. It is hoped that parents will caution their children to play elsewhere in order to keep the grounds in presentable condition. In previous years the work of caring for the tablet and the surrounding grounds has been done by the air raid wardens. This year there may possibly be others who would like to offer their services which is only for one week a year, if so, they may notify Edwin Sammons, telephone 2204-W.

The War Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The reformation of Germany presents vast and unprecedented problems for Allied solution, and the greatest of these is how best to re-educate the people of the Reich so as to eliminate the curse of Nazism and Prussianism.

Hitler remolded the thought of the nation by intensive education along his evil lines. There is no cure except more education along the right lines.

The first task will be to determine what are the right lines, and that won't be easy because there's no exact precedent for guidance. The job of re-education will take years, and the Allies can't afford to make serious mistakes. The wrong approach would be adding to the damage already done by the war-mongering dictator.

So where do we begin? The other night I spoke on foreign affairs at a dinner, and during a question period after a university president raised the point of what type of education should be provided in Germany in order to achieve peace. We quickly found we agreed that the educational program should be such as would give the Germans the greatest degree of acquaintance with the peoples of other nations.

And what would be the medium of this education? Well, the most important would seem to be the every-day news of all categories, told in straightforward manner through press and radio. Short of travel, that's the easiest way to become acquainted with other peoples. And by news one means a humanized report that includes those garden-fence chats which are so essential to neighborly understanding.

It strikes me this is useful to remember not only in connection with Germany's rehabilitation but in considering the relations among other countries. The present day difficulties cropping up even among the United Nations are due in many instances to lack of acquaintance with the other fellow. That breeds suspicion.

This is true even in the case of two Allies who are as close together as are America and England. And (whisper) it has much to do with such difficulties as crop up among the Big Three themselves—America, Britain and Russia.

Have you noticed the development of good relations between the soldiers of the western Allies and the men of Russia as they have come together in the heart of Germany? As utter strangers they approached one another, it not with some misgivings, but even less with much reserve. Once they had met, however, all reserve was gone and they got along in grand style.

There presumably will have to be a security censorship during the military occupation of Germany. As viewed from here, though, this needn't interfere with the free publication of regular news. Suppression of propaganda would only defeat the educational program.

cut off from outside aid. Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today, as a result of a new American landing on that island, second largest in the Philippines.

Battle-seasoned Yanks of the 40th Division swarmed ashore unopposed Thursday at Macajalar Bay, on the island's north coast, to surprise and checkmate the enemy's garrison in Bukidnon Province, in the interior. Rear Adm. A. D. Struble commanded the amphibious force.

The Bukidnon Japanese had been backing northward, trying to get away from the Yank 31st Division, coming at them from the south. The 40th Division operation constituted a landing in the rear of this enemy unit. MacArthur said it left the enemy "incapable of serious opposition."

The Japanese at Davao continued fierce resistance. Nevertheless the Yank 24th Division gained against them.

Resigned Japanese on Tarakan, Borneo, also fought with tigerish fury and prevented Australian and Dutch assault units from capturing Dicoeaf oil field, in the central part of the island. However, the "Diggers" moved two miles south to within 1½ miles of the southern tip.

In the central part of Luzon Island, Philippines, a guerrilla force won high ground 3,600 yards north of Iloilo Dam, an important unit of Manila's water system which never has been relinquished by the Japanese. The U. S. 43rd Division was closing in slowly from two directions on the entrenched enemy there.

The chessboard aspect of the Mindanao campaign was brought out by the disclosure of heretofore unmentioned activities of guerrilla forces.

An army spokesman said Col. Wendell Fertig's forces landed a fortnight ago at Butuan Bay in the first amphibious guerrilla operation covered by American naval guns. Butuan Bay is about 60 miles east and north of Macajalar. Still farther northeastward another guerrilla force has been harassing Japanese in the extreme northern arm of Mindanao, MacArthur disclosed.

A Tokyo broadcast intended for American consumption asserted that a Japanese force had made a counter-landing on Samar Island in Davao Bay.
